

Four local lawyers win kudos

Four Columbia attorneys have been chosen by their associates as the best in their field of criminal law.

Named in the recently published book "National Directory of Criminal Lawyers" were Terrell Glenn, Jack Swerling, David Bruck and Costa Pleicones.

The book, published by California attorney Barry Tarlow, is the result of a survey of 8,000 members of the Bar.

According to Tarlow, the lawyers polled said they would retain these attorneys "in the event that someone close to them was involved in a serious criminal problem."

Other South Carolina attorneys included in the book are Dan Bowling, Dale Cobb, Coming Gibbs, Arthur Howe, Morris Rosen, Arthur Rosenblum and Robert Wallace, all of Charleston, and Danny Speights of Hampton.